Stay On Track: Milestones for Each College and Year

Working with academic advising professionals on campus, the Career Center has developed recommended career path milestones for students in each college. By using these college-specific game plans, you will be able to maximize your time and avoid the “wish-I-had-known blues.”
Getting “The” Job, Not “a” Job

The good news is there are lots of jobs out there. The bad news is that all jobs are not right for you. Sometimes we say, “The hardest job you will ever have is finding the right job.” The job search will test your self-knowledge, research skills, organization, persistence and persuasion. Finding the job you want has to be a planned, systematic effort. Your career depends not just on knowing your qualifications, but how well you market them.

Let say that again—it’s essential, and we promised you the essential. Your career depends not only on your qualifications, but also on how well you market them.
