

CAREER ASSESSMENTS

Self-assessment, the first step in the career planning process, facilitates awareness of values, interests, personality type, skills and strengths. Reflection and understanding of these characteristics can be helpful when making major and career decisions.

Career assessments help connect an individual's values, interests, personality type, and skill set to majors and careers. Please note that they do not provide definitive answers, measure aptitude or ability, or predict individual success in an occupational or educational program.

Free Assessments For Students

The assessments below take approximately 30-45 minutes to complete.

Strong Interest Inventory

Assesses and categorizes your interests on several scales. Results are printed and given to you in a follow-up appointment with a Career Counselor. Scores indicate how similar your interests are to those of professionals in various fields.

Myers-Briggs Type Indicator

Reports personality preferences in four areas: focusing attention, receiving information, making decisions and navigating environments. Results include a personality profile, as well as a list of careers others with similar preferences have found satisfying. Results are printed and given to you in a follow-up appointment with a Career Counselor.

FOCUS2

Combines self-assessment, major/career exploration, decision making and action planning all in one. FOCUS2 is customized with UCR's majors, and results are matched to career options and majors offered by the University. Schedule an appointment with a Career Counselor to discuss your results.

Fee Based Assessment For Students

CareerLeader / $20

CareerLeader is a career development tool that assesses patterns of business-relevant interests, values and abilities. It also provides resources to explore these areas in the context of industry. Once the student completes the assessment, results are immediately generated. Students should schedule a career assessment interpretation appointment with a Career Counselor to review their results.

Take The Test

Purchase and/or register for the test that has been recommended by a Career Counselor. Follow the instructions supplied by the Career Counselor.
